

I'm concerned about Sinclair Broadcasting's decision to force their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election.

When I worked in radio (in the 80's) our station gave equal time to opposing views anytime they aired something of an editorial nature. I was under the impression that "equal access" was an FCC requirement.....part of the need to use public airwaves to serve the public interest of the community reached by the station's broadcast signal.

The FCC needs to guard our airwaves!
Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. This together with the half-time fiasco at the Superbowl show why many stations should not be in the hands of a single company. (in that instance the network broadcasting the Superbowl used another network owned by the same corporate giant to choreograph the half time show). These examples show why the license renewal process needs to be more rigorous. Thank you for the opportunity to express my opinion.
